FIERCE FIGHTING RAGES AMONG AIR, SEA, LAND FORCES

Shanghai Business Section
Reverberates to Severe Shocks

1 "JAP" PLANE DOWN Issue Still Undecided As Both Sides Lay Claim To Victories

By Floyd Gibbons
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright 1932 by I. N. S.)
SHANGHAI, Feb. 5 (3.28 P. M.)—The Shanghai business section shook and reverberated to the shocks of heavy explosions this afternoon as the Chinese-Japanese conflict raged the international city with a circle of bursting bombs, hurtling projectiles, and withering volleys of machine gun lead.

Air, land and sea forces all engaged in the fiercest fighting, with the issue still undecided as both belligerents made conflicting claims of victory.

At least one Japanese plane was brought down, although dozens still are flying through the mist over downtown streets, with heavy bombs visible in the racks under the lower wings, while thousands of faces, white and yellow, are lifted skyward toward the death and destruction hovering above.

No misdirected Japanese bombs landed in the international concession, but Chinese anti-aircraft missiles are falling in neutral territory, sometimes exploding, but more often not.

The Japanese transport ship Mamiya Maru landed 1,000 troops on the south bank of the Yangtze between the Woosung forts and the village of Paoshan, while another transport steamer, the Kaya Maru, stood by, ready to unload another thousand infantrymen.

Howitzers, field guns and machine guns were taken from the Mamiya Maru and prepared for action against the Chinese.

(Editor's note: The arrival of two transports Mamiya and Kaya Maru with 2,000 Japanese troop reinforcements was exclusively announced in International News Service dispatches from Shanghai yesterday afternoon.)

Armed patrols of all different nationalities, afoot, mounted, and packed in motor trucks, cruise streets packed with a hundred thousand refugees. Rickshaw coolies, barefooted in spite of the sudden severe cold and drawing enormous loads of household goods, are herded and hurried on by the tall, bearded city policemen using clubs for speed.

The choppy surface of the Whangpoo opposite the Bund is covered with launches, sampans, ocean liners, ferry boats, tramp steamers, barges, and Chinese junks as dispatch boats, destroyers, and river gunboats churn the waters, flying flags of all nations.

A heavy artillery firing continued late this afternoon. A strong wind from the sea is fanning many fires carrying a calm of smoke as well as burning paper down into the faces of Nanking shoppers.

The port now is suggestive of World War days, lacking only the camouflage of ships.

Just before noon a Japanese bomber dropped down one thousand yards northwest of the American lines. The plane was engaged in bombing Chinese artillery position on the Shanghai-Nanking Railroad.

The British protested this morning over shells which dropped into their zone in the International Settlement. In response to the protest, one Chinese and one Japanese junior officer arrived at the British headquarters to apologize. The British did not know whether these missiles were of Japanese or Chinese origin; neither did the apologetic messengers, but it was their duty to apologize, so they did.

The Chinese military apologist said: "Velly sorry, gunner on our anti-aircraft guns make mistake. Firing on Japanese plane. Velly sorry. Now find mistake and correct figures."

The Japanese military apologist said: "Please pardon out. Our gunners make slight error. Elevation of gun firing on Chinese station too high, miss station, fire your zone. Very sorry. Locate error on firing data, now lower range."

The British Tommies shown here are now standing shoulder to shoulder with United States Marines to repel any attempt by the warring Orientals to invade the foreign settlement, which shelters American and British nationals.

YOUTHFUL SLAYER IS PUZZLING OFFICIALS

Stanley Wismer is Apparently Indifferent To The Serious
Charges Against Him

SEEMS UNCONCERNED

Apparently indifferent to the charge of murder that has been lodged against him, 14-year-old Stanley Wismer, stoic slayer who is puzzling the authorities of Bucks county, yesterday sat motionless through the inquest conducted by Coroner John J. Sweeney, M. D., at Doylestown, as he listened to a State Police officer briefly outline the boy's own story as to how and why he killed his employer, Elmer D. Bartholomew, 28.

Not the least bit disturbed by the fact that he is to be tried later this month for the most serious crime on the criminal calendar, Stanley appeared at the inquest held in the office of Justice of the Peace Irvin M. James, without counsel.

Coroner Sweeney, after hearing the testimony of Private Thomas Toye, of the State Police, directed the jury of six men to hold the boy for the action of the Grand Jury at the next term of Court of Oyer and Terminer of Bucks County on a charge of murder.

"I am not going to call you to testify," Coroner Sweeney said to the boy.

Private Toye had testified that Stanley's age is 16.

"He made one mistake," Stanley said, turning to the officer. "I'm just 14 and not 16," he added.

"Well, it does not make much difference about your age," Dr. Sweeney replied as he directed the officer to take Stanley back to the Bucks County Prison.

Dressed in prison overalls, and showing no physical effect as a result of his confinement in jail, Stanley, who a Commonwealth alienist last month pronounced "mentally normal," said that he was having "a good time in prison" and had read eight books.

Six jury members, including Chief of Police James J. Welsh, Andrew Schott, Dr. Walter S. Haney, Samuel E. Spare, Samuel Kieder and Russell B. Gulick, returned the verdict. They found that Bartholomew came to his death as a result of five 22-caliber rifle shots fired into his body by young Wismer, whom he employed as a farm hand.

Trooper Toye testified that Wismer confessed to the shooting and that he gave as his motive the fact that he did not want to ask his boss to borrow his car to drive to Hatfield to see his sick mother, so decided several days before the killing to shoot him and take the car without his permission.

The killing took place on the morning of January 8 in the barn on the Bartholomew farm. Wismer was later arrested in Lansdale at the home of his sister. After his arrest he told several stories as to the number of shots actually fired but he has never changed the motive of the crime. He had not expressed any regret over the commission of murder. If the boy has any emotion, he has not shown it outwardly.

During the next two weeks, an attorney will be appointed by President Judge Hiram H. Keller to represent Wismer. Yesterday, after the inquest had been completed, William Reese Scott, 3d, of Doylestown, the youngest member of the Bucks County Bar Association, was in conference with Coroner Sweeney. Although no public announcement has been made of his appointment as counsel to represent Wismer, it was intimated that he may defend the boy.

CHURCHVILLE MAN HAS INVENTION RECOGNIZED

Earl O. Snyder Constructs The Fractionating "Snyder Ball Column"

COMPARE EIGHT TYPES

CHURCHVILLE, Feb. 5.—Declared to be the most efficient of its kind, the small fractionating column designed and built by Earl O. Snyder, Churchville, professor in the science department of the new Olney high school, has obtained for its inventor recognition.

While employed by the Barrett Company as a chemical engineer, Mr. Snyder realized the need for a fractionating column that was sufficiently small for general use by students and industry and also efficient. He immediately began working and the result of his labors is what is now known as the "Snyder Ball Column," named after its inventor.

Mr. J. R. Simons and E. C. Watner, of the University of Pennsylvania, made a comparison of eight types of small fractionating columns from the viewpoint of usefulness in the student laboratory. The result of their experiment was published in the January, 1932, issue of the "Journal of Chemical Education" in an article entitled "A Comparison of Eight Types of Small Fractionating Columns from the Viewpoint of the Usefulness in the Student Laboratory of Organic Chemistry." In the conclusion of this article Mr. Snyder's invention was declared to be the most efficient fractionating column of its kind.

Mr. Snyder has been a resident in Churchville for a number of years. He is a past president of the Churchville Building and Loan Association; and since its beginning has been a member of the Churchville Club. Before going to the Olney high school, Mr. Snyder was a professor at the Central high school, Philadelphia, for a number of years.

AN EVENING OF MIRTH

"Surprise" Speaker at Mock Commencement Is
"Mahatma Ghandi"

The February Class of 1932, Bristol High School, made the most of its night last evening, when before a large company of parents and friends they presented an unusual program, filled with mirth.

Among the features were mock graduation exercises with many numbers happening contrary to the usual manner. In the processional the young men of the class gave a hand selection, with Joseph Britton, class president, later acting as master of ceremonies on the stage. Numerous members of the class participated in the exercises, essays being built upon a humorous line, and comic awards being made for "activities." One of the surprises of the evening listed on the mock commencement program as "Guest Speaker, a well-known celebrity," was the appearance of "Mahatma Ghandi." This well-known Indian, impersonated by a member of the class, appeared in sheet, high silk hat and glasses, giving a talk on India.

The Mothers' Association essay prize was presented by Mrs. Herbert Hanson, president of the association, to David Spector. This was a gift of $15, awarded annually for the best essay on a given subject.

President Britton on behalf of his class presented to the school, through Robert Wright, president of the student body, a spot-light for use in stage performances. Other gifts included remembrances from the class members to Miss Geneva Dalbow and Silas Shoemaker, class advisors.

The play, "Who Kissed Barbara?" was well presented, the actresses and actors, members of the class of '32, taking their parts well.

Another part of the program in two scenes showed the past and future of the February class of '32, and the present of the same group. Class prophecy was given by Geneva Silber, and the present was announced by Albert Tentilucci. Miss Dorothy Unruh gave the last will and testament in which the usual class bequests of humorous nature were made.

The class poem, "Dear Bristol High," written by Miss Esther Londorburgh, was read by the author; and the entire class joined in singing the class song written by Marie Buchler. Bristol high school orchestra gave selections throughout the evening.

Officers of the class include: President, Joseph Britton; vice-president, David Spector; secretary, Edward Gaffney; treasurer, Mary McAuley.

The members of this, the last mid-year class to graduate from Bristol High, are:

Anna Asta, Katherine Baur, Joseph Britton, Marie Buchler, Mildred Crudo, Josephine DeLissio, Mildred Dyer, Marjorie Fagan, Margaret Fox, Edward Gaffney, Maud Griffice, Maris Hart, George Herman, James Hill, Esther Londerbough, Mary McAuley, Ralph Narcissi, Isabelle Nills.

Hoary Old King Winter Making Belated "Big Push"

Faithful to the predictions of Bre'r Groundhog, decidedly not a fair weather friend, hoary Old King Winter had a belated "big push" well under way in Pennsylvania today.

Whistling winds and snow flurries, in some instances attaining the proportions of a miniature blizzard, swept over northern and northwestern Pennsylvania. From one to three inches of snow was reported in Pike, Monroe, Wayne, Lackawanna and Luzerne counties by the Highway Department.

Early today snow flurries, whipped along by icy gales, were sweeping across Erie, Potter, Elk and Clearfield counties.

Seventy highway department trucks were ordered out to clear away snow and scatter cinders on highways in the northern tier.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—(INS)—With six deaths and numerous injuries attributed to Chicago's first heavy snowfall of the winter, mounting temperatures today gave promise of warm, clear weather over the week-end.

Yesterday's blinding snowstorm was indirectly responsible for five deaths on the city streets, while the five-inch snow blanket's temptation to sleigh claimed one victim.

PATIENCE

Lack of patience ruins more great enterprises than lack of ideals, or lack of knowledge, or even lack of energy. Impatience begets hopelessness, driving men alternately to ill-considered activity or deadening apathy. We fail and blame the conditions in which we live, the difficulties of our own temperament, when the true secret of our distressing ineffectiveness is impatience.

It may be doubted whether many of us recognize what patience really is. We mistake its character and office. We may easily condemn it as being merely passive, quiescent and submissive.

Even Shakespeare blundered when he attempted to describe it. Rarely does he show less insight than when he pictures "Patience sitting on a monument, smiling at Grief."

It would have been truer if he had presented it as strong, active, courageous, resolute in fellowship to bear the ills and checks of life with a settled purpose of faithfulness to duty.

Ruskin is more in correspondence with fact when he declares that "the Patience who really smiles at Grief usually stands, or walks, or even runs; she seldom sits." But even this is inadequate. Let us call patience "the King of Virtues," or adopt Tertullian's description and regard it as "God's foster-daughter."

Patience is more than endurance. It is hopefulness made constant by the confidence of faith. It has the ideal in its heart, and knows that what it treasures there will some day become a fact of life, if only men are faithful. Truth, fellowship, loyalty, virtue cannot be manufactured by the ingenuity or industry of men. They must grow, and for this time is necessary; time, with all its contrariant experiences in the dull dark nights of winter, its stinging winds and cruel cold, as well as in the bright days of spring and the glory of the summer's sun.

Without patience men settle down to no continuous effort. Committing themselves to an enterprise deserving the enthusiasm with which they enter it, when the immediate results are disappointing they slacken effort and abandon their resolution. They will not wait for further developments, and, stricken with the instability of the double-minded, they sink into despair.

But the worst results of impatience are not found in the failure of great and noble work. They are seen in the character of those who have become the victims of its scorn and fretfulness. Starting by being impatient with the conditions in which they live and work, they end by becoming impatient with themselves. Soon they impute the ineffectiveness of their lives to an ineradicable weakness in their character, for which they are not responsible and against which it is useless to struggle, but on account of which they are forever complaining. They not only blunt the instrument by which alone good work can be done, but go on to assert that the work is impossible.

Being dignified doesn't leave much time for working.

SYNOPSIS

The Mexican peons, grown tired of Paco Morales' oppression, await the word from "El Coyote," their masked protector, to overthrow him. Morales has enlisted the aid of the U. S. Cavalry to capture the notorious bandit. Ted Radcliffe, a young American, learns that Morales is responsible for his late father's ruin. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, urges him not to make an enemy of Morales, as he has other plans. Ted is enamored of Morales' beautiful niece, Adela. At a fiesta, Jito, Morales' ward, jealous of Ted, challenges him to a wrestling match. Ted wins, and Adela, sensing Jito's hatred, exacts a promise from Ted never to fight with him. Morales informs Bob that his men will join in the search for "El Coyote" and that Jito has dedicated himself to kill the bandit.

CHAPTER XIX

"Your pesos I do not greatly need," the young Mexican answered. "I will kill El Coyote for the joy of it. Instead I shall claim—what should I claim?" He smiled at the girl before him. "Should it be the love of our cousin Adela?"

Morales's stiff lips also smiled, but a little sadly. "If that were in my power to give, I should give it."

"But that will never be in your power to give away, will it, dear?" the girl asked. She patted his thin hand. "You must keep all the love I give you, ungracious one, not offer it to every hot-headed boy."

Ted broke the silence. "Why are you so bitter against this border thief? After all, there have been other bandits and cattle rustlers who have come and gone."

"Señor, if it were just a few head of cattle or horses he takes, or the few herdsmen of mine he has killed, I should not greatly care. What are cows or peons? But El Coyote is no mere bandit. To me he represents the enemy. He carries with him disaster greater than the loss of those herds. He carries with him what might be the end of all that I and my fathers before me have built up—our right to rule here in the border. That is why."

"My fathers carved a domain out of a wilderness. They did it by sheer strength and by their will. It was their will to rule. That was their religion. It is my religion. This country is mine. Not so many years ago the peons about here were the slaves of my grandfather. They should still be slaves, and in all but name they are, for I am master, and this, as I see it, is right, and the will of God. And now comes this bandit dog and to the peons says: 'You are men. This land is yours. Yours is the right to own cattle and graze them, and yours is the right to marry and give your daughters in marriage, and if anyone comes between you and your liberty, kill him. See how little I fear this great master of yours. I kill his men, I burn his ranches, I take his best cattle. I cut his fences and I laugh!'"

"And, señor, he does all these things so that my people whisper and grow discontented and take heart and believe perhaps that they too can do these things and rise up against me. Already I hear murmurings. Already my Jito has had to teach fear to them when they refused to pay us the rents and the shares that are our due. These times are times of unrest in the border country, and if a leader should find his way to the hearts of these people—"

The voice shook in a moment's passion. "—for me and for all that my people have built up, it might be the end. Rather than that I should see myself dead. And I shall spend my lifetime hunting down this dog—this son of a dog."

"I think you'll forget all those fine-spun theories when you really love," Ted Radcliffe, said Adela.

Morales had risen, and his face was jerking in anger. Quickly Adela came to his side, and her hand stroked his cheek.

"Be not aroused, my uncle," she whispered in quick Spanish. "You must not do this. Please, for me." And she petted and scolded him back to calmness, yet his hand still shook a little as he drained another glass of the straw-colored wine.

"You must forgive," he said at last. "It is the only subject in which I let myself become a foolish old man. That is my folly. But to answer your questions in a word, I hate this Coyote because he breaks my power. He damages my scheme of things." Resolutely he shook off the moment's weakness and was again able to smile, but the look of anxiety still remained in Jito's and Adela's eyes.

All zest had gone from the little group. The dinner was finished almost in silence, and later Adela spoke to Ted of her uncle's outburst against the bandit.

"My uncle's passion in life," she told him as they stood outside the patio, "is to continue this realm he has built up. It is for that he wants me to marry and have children. It was this tragedy that he himself had no children except—you will learn this sooner or later, for it is border gossip—except Jito, whose mother I never knew. Jito has come nearest to taking the place of a son, yet he cannot inherit. I wish he could. And now El Coyote threatens to arouse the people and topple over my uncle's kingdom. So for that he has hated the bandit with such hate as I am afraid to think of. He broods. It is unhealthy. I have watched him fail during the past years since this bandit came."

"But isn't all this thing that your uncle stands for destined to fall sometime?"

For a while the girl made no answer, looking out into the night. At last she turned and nodded quickly. "It is true," she said. "It seems almost treason for me to say it, but it cannot be otherwise. Only it will be the end of my uncle and all that he represents. And for me it would mean—quien sabe? What would you say I am fit for, Ted Radcliffe, in that busy world that you come from and that some day is going to engulf us here? I often wonder what I should be good for. I should be ever so much worse off than you when you found yourself cast adrift without warning. You have been brave not to let it make any difference to you."

"I shouldn't say it hasn't made any difference. So far as my future goes it may have made a great deal. For one thing, I am very nearly penniless. That's bound to create an important difference, whether I go back East or stay here. It shouldn't but it's bound to. Today Bob was joking with me about the need to marry a rich girl. At the present moment I haven't even the right to fall in love, and in the old days, when I was one of the world's eligible young men, I didn't avail myself of the opportunity."

Adela was watching him with a little frown. "You really mean that if you fell in love you wouldn't feel you had the right? That just because you lacked a few miserable dollars you would kill that love?"

"I'd go away, I suppose."

"In that case," she replied in her calm, judicial way, "I should say you were what Jito calls 'one very damn fool.' What has love to do with anything but love?"

"I once thought that. Once, when I never had to think about the importance of three meals a day. But it wouldn't be a very heroic act, would it, for a man to ask a woman to starve with him, even for love's sake? Love, if it means anything, must mean protection and care."

Again she smiled. "I think you'll forget all those fine-spun theories when you really love, Ted Radcliffe."

"You're an expert, then, on that subject?"

"Oh, we Spanish are born with a knowledge about love. I have been in love so many times."

"Really?"

"Of course." Her eyes, like stars in the half-light, challenged him.

CROYDON

The Croydon Relief held its meeting at the fire house Wednesday evening and as usual it proved very interesting. All men who are not working are asked to report at the fire house Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 12:30, to help the men with autos to collect. There are days when the regular men are unable to go. Next meeting will be February 17th, with a short meeting and a card party.

A delightful time was had by all who attended the annual dinner-dance of Golden Sceptre Lodges, Saturday night in Philadelphia. There was installation of officers during the evening. Among those who were present from Croydon Lodge were: Mr. and Mrs. G. Sottung, Mr. and Mrs. W. Weller, Mrs. G. Cornwells, Misses Florence Conn, Marie Fisher, Mary McCahan, Mrs. Otto Louchner, George Fisher and George Brandenger.

UNIONTOWN—All records for suicides in Fayette County were shattered last year when 20 men and women took their lives, County Coroner S. A. Baltz announced.

The usual average was about half that number. Baltz said despondency over the present lack of employment was responsible for the sharp rise in the number of self-inflicted deaths.

Will You Help Those who are Willing to Work?

A number of men, women and girls of various vocations, who are willing to work but cannot find employment, have registered with the Bristol Unemployment Bureau.

Many of these have dependents and are the heads of families who find themselves in stringent circumstances during this time of depression.

A list of all such persons is available to those desiring the services of such a person or persons, regardless of the length of time for which such employment might be offered.

You are asked to make some sacrifice. Do your share by providing work for one or several days at your home or place of business.

If those who are able will give employment to these folks and thus aid them to earn that which they need, they will be accomplishing a two-fold purpose.

STATE NEWS

PITTSBURGH.—"Controversial subjects like the League of Nations and the prohibition question should not be fought in the schools," maintains N. R. Criss, board of education director, here.

He further stipulated that no more essay contests would be held in the public schools unless they originate with the principals. Criss then decreed that the subject for the essays should be "of general interest."

His statements were occasioned by a request of Mrs. Sidney Kaufmann, of the International Relations Committee, to hold an essay contest on the League of Nations. The plea was turned down.

Criss, in announcing his refusal, said:

"Not only do these contests take up too much of the pupils' time but controversial subjects like the League of Nations and Prohibition should not be fought in the schools."

Marriage Mystery Solved?

The mysterious "Hector MacNeal" who became the new hubby of Edith Gould Wainwright, the former Edith Gould of the prominent New York society family, is believed to be Sir Hector Murray MacNeal, British shipping magnate. The marriage was performed in Reno, Nev., recently, a few hours after the society beauty had obtained a divorce from her former husband, Carroll Livingston Wainwright, an artist. Above are recent photos of the couple.

Japanese Forces on Warpath

With the flag of the Rising Sun Empire at their head, Japanese naval forces are shown as they marched through the Chapei district of Shanghai, on the occasion of a previous Sino-Jap disturbance. This time their marching was not so peaceable. Planes from the Jap warships in Shanghai harbor bombed this same district, teeming with Chinese natives, inflicting terrible damage and loss of life.

Million-Dollar Blaze

Dense volumes of acid smoke are shown pouring from the plant and yards of the Henry P. Duker Lumber Company, at Baltimore, Md., at the height of the conflagration, regarded as one of the worst in the city's history. Eleven alarms rushed 3 fireboats, 60 engines and 400 men to the scene to battle the flames. The heat in the vicinity of the blazing plant was so intense that three lines of hose actually melted. Thousands of residents fled from the danger area. Cause of the fire is unknown and damage estimated at $1,000,000.

Flight Sans Wings

The question that perplexes the layman who sees the above photo is how the jumper managed to land without breaking a leg or two. Alf Engen, U. S. professional ski-jump champion, is the athlete who is soaring away over the hill. This leap was made at Ecker Hill, Salt Lake City, Utah, and turned out to be a record—226 feet.

ONLY GRAND SLAM IN GOLF MADE BY JONES

By Nan O'Reilly
(International News Service Writer)
NEW YORK, Feb. 5—(INS)—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., born St. Patrick's Day, 1902.

Retired from golf at the advanced age of 28, in 1930.

In seven lean years of championship play, never won a title. In the next seven years, he won nine American crowns alone. From the time he beat Bobby Cruickshank in 1923 to win his first blue ribbon, Jones was never without a title. When he wrote "Finis" at the end of the chapter in 1930 he had achieved the seemingly impossible by winning golf's one and only grand slam—the British amateur and open, the American amateur and open, all in five months.

Bobby smokes cigarettes. Likes games, and is a natural player; favors fishing and hunting, trap shooting and ping-pong, chess and pool and billiards. Doesn't play bridge but loves to get a quartette started. Will sing "The Wreck of the Old '97" without provocation.

During championships had to be safeguarded from his well-wishers so had a bodyguard assigned to hem him in. Has marvelous concentration. Once a club-thrasher—threw his putter in the North Sea in his first British open championship in 1921 and has never lived down the disgrace. His nerves will under control now all though his ears get red when he misses a shot.

As a golfer in the heat of combat he is a real man-killer, cold-blooded and full of fury. As a man in his home he is jolly and happy, a good fellow and staunch friend. Married his boyhood sweetheart, Mary Malone.

Once feasted on apple pie and coffee for lunch and ate big breakfasts during a championship. Now limits his sating to a strip of bacon and cup of black coffee for breakfast, a slice of dry toast and cup of tea for luncheon. Eats big dinner at night, always in his room, prefaced by two good, stiff highballs, the first of which is taken (inwardly) in a tub of hot water. Finds hot bath and cold highball the finest relaxing combination.

Looks like an old man after the gruelling seventy-two hole national open, and loses from ten to fourteen pounds, which he can well spare.

In 1913 saw the master golfer of the world, Harry Vardon. Next time he saw Vardon they were paired in the national open in 1920. Victory of Francis Ouimet over Vardon in 1913 at Brookline fired Bobby's imagination—and after Jones quit the game he saw Ouimet succeed him as amateur champion after an interval of 17 years. Greatest rounds of Bob's career are his unbelievable 66 and 68 at Sunningdale.

Tied with four pros for the national open, won and lost two in hand-to-hand combat. Won the open before the amateur, yet the two could not be compared from a competitive angle. When he won his first British open it had been 29 years since an amateur had broken through. Started his big parade in Merion and fourteen years later walked off the same course acclaimed as the world's greatest golfer. So much has been written about

Jones that it seems futile to "gild the lily"—but golfers have a word for him and it is "genius."

Fierce Fighting Rages
Among Air, Sea, Land Forces

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5—(INS)—The first air battle between Chinese and Japanese since hostilities began at Shanghai was fought on the outskirts of Chapel this afternoon.

An undetermined number of Chinese planes, arriving from Nanking during the night, went into action against seven Japanese bombers returning from a raid over the Chapel district.

One Japanese plane is known to have crashed. A second Japanese plane was reported shot down by Chinese anti-aircraft fire.

The Chinese are reported to have lost one plane but whether in the air duel or by anti-aircraft gunfire is not known.

By Dixon Hoste
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—Between three and four thousand Japanese troops were landed at daybreak today on the Yangtze river bank between Liu-Ho and Pao-Shan, northwest of Woosung, to reinforce Japanese marines and blue-jackets in a grand offensive against the Chinese at Shanghai.

The reinforcements disembarked from two transports whose arrival off Woosung was exclusively reported by International News Service yesterday.

Another troopship, believed to be crowded, arrived at Shanghai tonight. A strong cordon of Japanese marines was thrown about the wharf and no one was permitted to approach. Apparently these men are to go ashore during the night to join at once in the attack on Chapel.

REFUSES COMMENT

DuBois, Pa., Feb. 5.—George J. Prosser, state commander of the American Legion today declined to comment on the accusation of Rev. James J. Cox, Pittsburgh, that the Legion had been "sold out," in the interests of politics, at the Detroit convention. The fiery Catholic priest in an address last night, charged that President Hoover acting on the advice from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, swayed the Legion to ask for "beer instead of bonus."

STATE NEWS

PITTSBURGH—Because of the lack of an adequate auditorium, commencement exercises of the University of Pittsburgh will be held at the stadium this year on June 8, Chancellor John G. Bowman announced.

Should the plan prove feasible, the stadium will be used hereafter, he said.

Thousands of parents and relatives were turned away from the exercises in past years because of the limited seating capacity of the hall. Each year's graduating class numbers almost 1,400 persons.

Three platforms for speakers will be erected in the stadium. No provisions for inclement weather have been made. A study of data for the past 23 years revealed that June weather has always been near-perfect for outdoor exercises, university authorities said.

MEDIA—George E. Darlington, dean of the American Bar Association, believed to be the oldest practicing lawyer in the United States, believes "this modern age is a corrupt age."

He will be 100 years old on August 20.

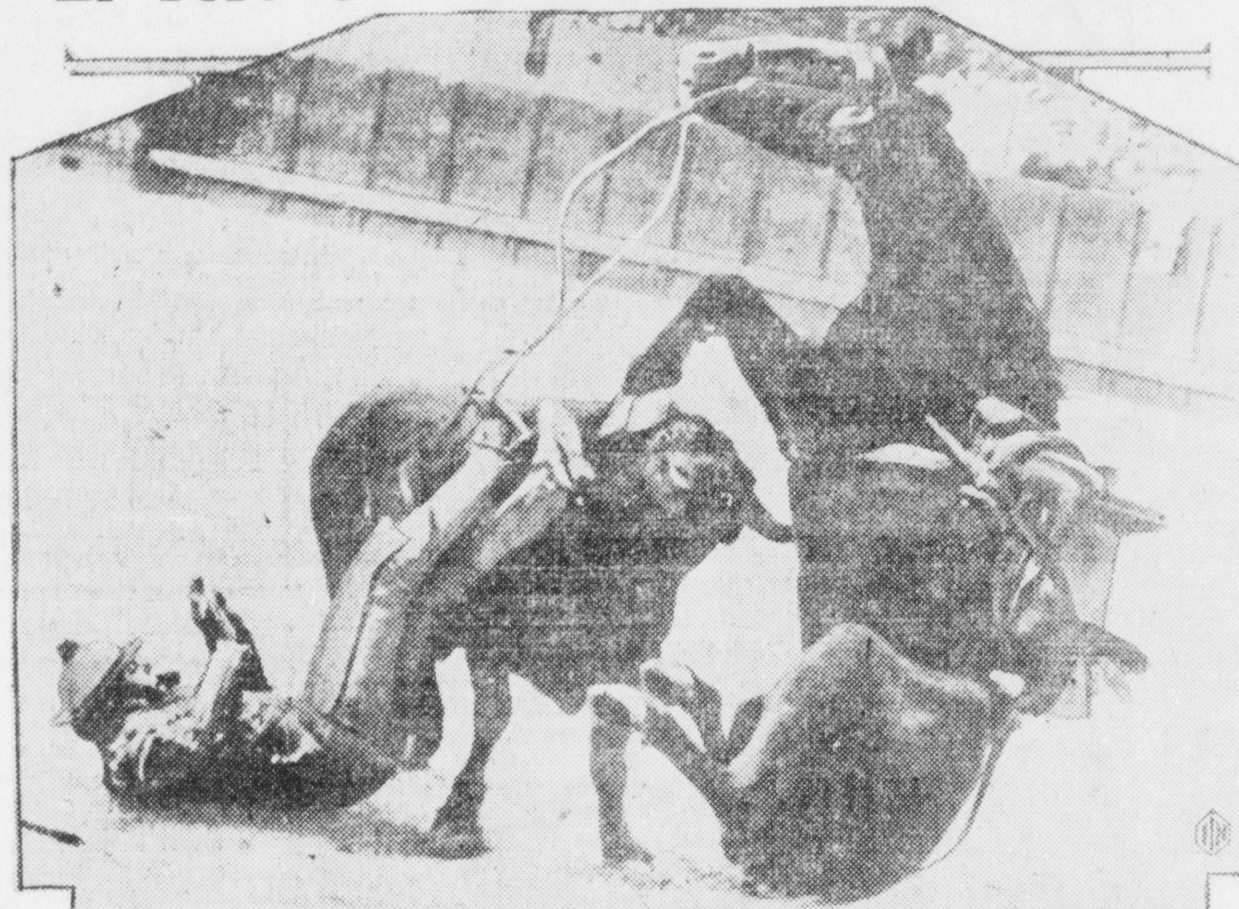

With vigor and conviction he deplored the "change in lawyers."

"In the olden days, a lawyer learned his profession by working in a law office. Today he goes to college, where young men form associations that are not good."

Darlington was admitted to the bar nearly 76 years ago.

El Toro Goes to the Mat with Matador

This spectacular photo, made during a performance of the national pastime at Madrid, Spain, shows a thrilling bit of action in the arena of blood and sand wherein the honors went to the bull. The infuriated animal is shown at the moment when he turned upon one of his tormentors and unhorsed him. Unfortunately it was the innocent horse that bore the brunt of the attack. The matador landed on his back within the danger zone and narrowly missed a similar fate to that of his mount, which was discomfited by the bull's horns. This is the feature of bull fighting to which Americans strenuously object. However the Spanish audience applauded loudly at the honors going to El Toro.

ABOVE we present greased lightning in human form—Howie Morenz, the speed king of the ice!

The whizzbang of the Les Canadiens doesn't skate—he flies over the ice. He is the fastest man in the fastest sport—hockey. And when he goes it's with a capital G.

The charming and rare thing about this professional athlete is his desire to make his money in the game at which he excels. Howie worked during the off-season last summer as a cigar salesman. Because of his vast popularity in Canada he was almost smothered beneath the flood of orders that overwhelmed him.

When Howie found out that his success in the weed industry was due to his reputation as an ice-skimmer he quit. "I want to get by on my ability, not on my reputation," he told his astounded employer.

The wise boys whose motto is "Get all you can while the get-ting's good" will sneer at young Mr. Morenz as a sentimentalist completely out of tune with the times. But if his action was sappy, it's the kind of sappiness thousands of American and Canadian sport fans admire.

Another true blue sportsman whose speed records have astonished the entire world is Kaye Don, the Englishman. Don can demolish distance with equal ease on land or sea. And lose or win Kaye comes up smiling. Last year when Gar Wood lured Kaye over the starting line ahead of the official gun and caused him to lose the Harmsworth Trophy speedboat races at Detroit, there was a hail of criticism directed at the American boatman but none of it came from his English rival.

When interviewed by newspaper men he refused to comment or complain. He took the breaks in the best British tradition—standing up and smiling. Gar Wood got the plaque but Kaye Don got the applause.

Last but not least in our collection of today's speed demons is Lefty Grove, who tosses baseballs with the velocity of navy torpedoes. All three of these speedsters—Kaye Don, Howie Morenz and Lefty Grove are modest, retiring fellows.

All of them have attained the topmost heights in their respective sports. None has ever made a noise about his talents. They are willing to depend solely on their ability for their glory.

The trio comprises a rapidly dwindling group in amateur and professional sports. In an age of ballyhoo, of get the money and the newspaper space, these three have stood aloof and concentrated all their efforts in their work. Each has come through gloriously.

Each of them—Canadian, Britisher and American—have speed to the nth degree and that most winning of sport personalities—the modest, sport for sport's sake, type of mind.
